
Information for authors :Requirements for Publication

Submitted articles must follow the style and guidelines that are prescribed by the American Psychological Association. (Check out <http://www.apastyle.org>) Submitted articles must be written in clear and lucid English and must be in final or near-final form. Rough drafts are always returned to the author for further rewriting unless the editor has given prior permission to submit a rough draft. Submitted materials must be original in nature and contents and unpublished in any other journals. Our e journal will consider articles that describe ideas and research topics that were originally presented at a conference or a symposium, but the article should preferably extend the original conference presentation. If a conference paper was published elsewhere in other journals, this must be disclosed at time of submission. We do treat the critical issue of copy-right infringements and plagiarism very seriously and with all due respect to honor the intellectual property of the original source. IJOP has a zero-tolerance policy with regard to plagiarism and copyrights. IJOP will not knowingly publish a plagiarized article and it will reject without review, as a matter of policy, any submissions from authors who previously submitted a plagiarized article to IJOP. Articles submitted for publication must be reworded in their entirety and should be all original in their contents. Authors who wish to submit an article must have a commanding authority to publish it in our journal. For example, we cannot accept and publish an article that reveals trade related information of the author's employer.
